“ Jess (Boo), my sister-cousin: I'm having a hard time processing this. We were cousins but raised close like siblings. I have so many memories that I'll hold dear. Throughout it all, you remained humble, never complained and always said, "I'm okay," even though you weren't. There's so much I could say. The reality is that we all loved you, but God loves you more. That's the only way I'll halfway understand. Love you much, Ray

“ I never would have thought that I would be sitting here writing these words to you. When I think back on that last night we were together, it seems like it was a premonition to something coming. That night there was an aura that I had never felt before inside your home. For some reason there was a spirit of celebration, love, rejoice, and togetherness that had overtaken the entire house. Both your sons were at home, all of your grandkids were there, and the kids moms were there too. We had the drinks pouring and music blasting louder than the club. We had a whole house party that night out of nowhere. Never in my wildest imagination would I have thought the next morning when I said goodbye, it would be my last time seeing you. Now I sit here wishing we could have one more conversation together because there's so much more I want to tell you. Until we meet again, Love always ❤️
